Subject matter expertise and experience are well represented in the team and its unique network.

To date the team has led and advised numerous engagements involving Cyber (Level 3 Zero Trust, Quantum resistant solutions) whose leadership includes the former Head of Cyber warfare at the White House along with a team of engineers who were responsible for the post Snowden era communications within much of the IC.

The team has also acted and successfully led efforts with the world's only ARL (Adiabatic Reverse Logic) semi conductor chip design company. Poised to impact the semi-conductor industry with widespread adoption across industry and government, the company stands alone with their technology and the Icon team have successfully guided them through two consecutive stages of development.

The team has also been driven by the evolving requirements of our investors. The dual use application of our client's technologies remain primary in our application of resources. The ongoing demands of balancing the requirements of Western security services whilst delivering evolutionary solutions to commercial industry remain at the very center of the group's efforts.

Subject matter expertise is a reflection of the wider network that the ICON team continuously strives to maintain.

This has become a critical part of the Icon offering and continues to differentiate ICON from many of its competitors.

The ICON team will continue to utilize a solutions based approach to financial engineering, for both it's clients and investors.

Our development and the success of our clients and investors will never stop.
